Computer Tip of the Month

If you are a new computer user, one of the first lessons you should learn is the importance and need of a backup. Without a backup you could lose your data at any time due to a virus, power failure or hard disk problem. This has happened to many people. In extreme cases, it has put companies out of business. Computers are becoming more and more reliable. This creates a false sense of security - we begin to think all our data are safe and secure and will never go away. It's not true - and never will be. Backups are really a necessity, and you are responsible for making backups of your files.
